

Navy for Tech's Industrious Garnett

Gail Garnett, the distance runner at Tech for the past two years, will join the navy tomorrow.

He's 18 and would have been a senior next fall, but he would have been ineligible for track because of the semester ruling.

Gail's program since he entered Tech was a killer-diller, a good example of self-sacrifice.

His academic work included a full business and college preparatory course. His grades were above the average.

Then came his outside work in a drug store. The daily hours were from 4 p. m. until midnight.

He usually retired about 1 a. m., got up about 6. Donning his track clothes, he would run over to a nearby park to take his workouts, then hurry home to study.

He plans to take the long hitch of 20 years in the navy, hopes that he can get into the pharmacy department.